

Shooting Out Street Lights Proves Expensive

Miami, Fla., July 20 (UP)—The beautiful streetlight breaker of Coconut Grove pondered today if her BB-gun antics were worth the fine and suspended sentence she received after battling two policemen who stopped her fun.

Mrs. Patricia Blatt, 22, a statuesque Irish-American, told police she shot out streetlights "to win a bet from my sister" and because they "shine in my window at night."

She and her sister, Mrs. Jean A. Dimier, of New York, were bicycling home Monday night, breaking out lights when police, surrounded by neighbors, stopped to question them.

The officers said Mrs. Blatt readily admitted taking pot-shots at the lights, but when her sister fainted during the questioning, she began berating them.

"She made a wreck out of me," Patrolman Frank Miguel said in court. He said Mrs. Blatt slapped him nine times and kicked him vigorously before being quieted.

Mrs. Blatt was fined $15 and given a 15-day suspended jail sentence. Her sister was released after the officers testified she was unconscious during the fracas.

contracts "and revive Europe and Asia for peace."

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—President Truman says he never has received support from any metropolitan daily newspapers in a "bitter" election campaign and he has "no respect for their political prognostications or their influence."

Mr. Truman, speaking informally at a reception by Illinois Democratic leaders last night, said that Arthur Hays Sulzberger, president of the New York Times, has acknowledged he was "misinformed" when he told Pope Pius XII in 1948 that Mr. Truman had no chance of election.

The President said Sulzberger told the pope he could "assure" him "that I wouldn't be in the White House after January," however, Mr. Truman said, when he later took up the matter with the New York newspaper, Sulzberger said that newspapermen "polled themselves" and "didn't talk to the voters."

Sulzberger, in New York, said he had always assumed that a conversation with the pope was as confidential as one that might be had with the President of the United States.

"I shall continue to adhere to my naive beliefs," he added.

"Without knowing either of these gentlemen, the facts can speak for themselves. In June of 1948, when I last saw his holiness with others present, there was only a few persons with whom I had come in contact who believed Mr. Truman could be elected in the fall."

"I was not among them. In November, however, my judgment was proved wrong, and it was not the first time."

"I am getting along in years, but I still have a chance to learn."

Mr. Truman said five days after the election, his representative to the Vatican, Myron C. Taylor, "who is an Episcopalian," called on the pope and his holiness asked why the President of the United States spent one-half hour of his time misrepresenting the election.

Peach Harvest in Full Swing at Nashville

Little Rock, July 20 (AP)—Harvesting of the 1949 peach crop is in full swing this week in the Nashville, Ark., area.

All evidences point to a profitable, relatively disease-free crop, says Dr. Curtis L. Mason, assistant professor in plant pathology at the University of Arkansas college of agriculture.

Dr. Mason, who completed a tour of the peach orchard area, reported today that disease damage in peaches would not be ten per cent of what it was last year.

In 1948 both quality and quantity of peaches were curtailed through bacterial spot, Mason said.

Favorable weather conditions have aided this year's crops, he added.

Senate Vote on Pact Likely Thursday

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Senator Baldwin (R-Conn.) urging the senate to approve the North Atlantic treaty, said today it could be expanded later into a world alliance to guard the peace.

He suggested also that an international police force is "within the range of possibility" under the treaty.

Some time late tomorrow the senate will vote on the 12-nation pact. The big issue is whether critics will be able to write in a declaration that the treaty does not carry any obligation for the United States to furnish arms to the other signers.

Senate leaders said the senate is certain to turn down efforts to write that in.

Baldwin argued to the senate that any major conflict in the future between two other nations ultimately would involve the United States.

"We know the hope of security and peace by isolation is futile and dead," he said. He went on to say the pact is not a threat to any nation "unless that nation chooses to cast itself in the role of aggressor."

As for the risks involved in the treaty, Baldwin said they by failing to join the alliance the United States would run the risk "of standing alone in the world." He added:

"We run the risk of losing the allies and friends who have not indicated, at great danger to themselves, that they desire to be on the side of peace and freedom and justice, which is our side. We run the risk of losing ultimately such world trade as we now have; xxx of losing for centuries to come the hope and possibility of building a world organization for the establishment of law and justice in the settlement of international disputes."

Another Top Labor Figure Succumbs

Pittsburgh, July 20 (AP)—Van A. Pittner, who looked like a school teacher, but led some of the most far-reaching organizing drives in the American labor movement, died last night at 61.

The CIO United Steelworkers vice president died at Mercy hospital where he had been a patient since July 7.

He was stricken by a heart ailment several months ago in Atlanta, Ga., while on his last union assignment—the CIO Southern organizing campaign. He was hospitalized for a time in New York city and then returned to his home here.

CIO President Philip Murray who worked side by side with Pittner both in the United Mine Workers of America and later, the United Steelworkers, expressed deep shock at his death.

"Even though we had known of his long illness, still his death is a great shock to all of us," Murray said.

Before he and John L. Lewis, UMW president, parted company in 1942, Pittner was president of UMW district 17 in Charleston, W. Va., heading 100,000 miners.

Actually the break between Lewis and Pittner came two years earlier when Pittner supported Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidency and Lewis supported Wendell Willkie.

In 1936 Pittner helped Lewis and Murray form the steelworkers organizing committee which later became the United Steelworkers.

VICTIM OF OWN DEVICE

Harrison, July 20 (AP)—C. B. Dorsey, manager of the Harrison Die Casting Co., is a victim of his own device.

His firm manufactured the parking meters recently installed in Harrison. The other day Dorsey received a summons to appear in city court. The charge: time had expired on a meter where his car was parked.

TAX COLLECTOR DIES

Osceola, July 20 (AP)—Clem C. Bawen, 75, tax collector for the Arkansas Revenue department since 1943, died at his home here last night.

The state motto of Iowa is "Our Liberties We Prize and Our Rights We Will Maintain."

Asks Right to Present His Own Case

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Dr. Edward U. Condon asked congress today to safeguard a person's right to present his own case once his name and reputation have become involved in an investigation.

Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, gave the senate rules committee his endorsement of a bill by Senator Lucas (D-Ill.), the senate majority leader.

The bill would permit a person suffering adverse criticism in a congressional inquiry to be heard and to cross-examine witnesses having testified against him.

In his statement Condon cited his own experience with the house committee on un-American activities. He said during most of 1947 "there appeared at frequent intervals unfriendly newspaper articles about me attributed to committee sources saying that I was about to be investigated by the committee and implying that sinister revelations were soon to be made."

Finally, he said, a subcommittee report was issued on March 1, 1948, "exclusively devoted to an attempt to support its unsupportable contention that I was untrustworthy and unfit for public office." In that report the subcommittee called Dr. Condon "one of the weakest links" in the nation's atomic security.

Condon, who denied this at the time, said the committee never has given him a hearing or amplified its report. The committee has taken the position that Condon never asked formally to be heard. It has said it will give him a hearing if he makes such a request.

Clubs

Victory
The Victory home demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. Earl Schooley Wednesday, July 6. There were eight members, two visitors, Mrs. Lays Hampton, Mrs. Thurston Hulsey, one new member, Mrs. Jack Sumpter and the Home Demonstration agent Lorraine Blackwood present.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Horace Alfred, and the song of the month was sung. The devotional was given by Mrs. Earl Schooley and was followed by a prayer.
Minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. William Schooley, and approved.

Reports were given by two of the leaders, Mrs. Robert Cash on poultry, Mrs. Earl Schooley on gardening. The program was developing culture in crafts.

Mrs. Blackwood showed the members how to make aluminum trays. The club members decided to order aluminum and have an all day meeting in order to make some trays.

A demonstration was given by Mrs. Blackwood on basket weaving. Mrs. Earl Schooley assisted by Mrs. Thurston Hulsey and Mrs. William Schooley, served sandwiches, drinks, ice cream and cake.

Next meeting of the Victory club will be a community picnic at the home of Mrs. Horace Alfred on Wednesday August 3. Everyone is to bring a picnic lunch and drinks for their own family.

Baker
Making baskets and aluminum trays was the demonstration given by Lorraine Blackwood, home demonstration agent at the Baker home demonstration club meeting, Friday evening July 8 in the home of Mrs. Roy Baker.

Mrs. J. W. White, president called the meeting to order with the repeating of the American Creed followed by singing "America" the song of the month. Mrs. T. B. Whitten read the devotional and the roll call was answered with 13 members telling what they plan to exhibit at the fair. Mrs. T. B. Fenwick gave a garden report and Mrs. White led the discussion of the home demonstration club tour of the Ozarks during the business meeting.

The surprise package brought $1.20 which was won by Mrs. Whitten. Refreshments of cold drinks and cookies were served by the hostess.

The August meeting will be a picnic at Fair park, Friday night August 12, at 6:30 p.m.

Green Laster

The Green Laster home demonstration club held their June meeting at the home of Mrs. Riley Lewallen with Mrs. Mullins and Mrs. Russell Lewallen as co-hostesses. The house was called to order by the president. The evening was read by the group and the devotional was given by Mrs. Lewallen. A prayer was given by Mrs. Gentry and a report by Mrs. Luck on poultry.

Refreshments were served to 14 members and one guest.
The club will meet with Mrs. Ernest Cobb on July 22.

Union Official's Fate Argued in Court

Fayetteville, July 20 —(AP)—Opposing attorneys argued in Chancery court here today whether Joe Polson, Post Smith AFL union official, should be penalized for contempt of court.

Polson was ordered to "show cause" why he should not be cited for directing that pickets return to a construction job here.
Polson testified yesterday he didn't believe he was violating an injunction Chancellor John K. Butt had issued. He had no intention of defying the court, he said.

Six pickets were fined by Butt. A complaint against Polson later was filed.
The labor dispute involved a new rural electrification administration building on which Contractor Carl Tune was using workers not members of the AFL nod carriers union.

Gambling Kingpin Is Shot

Los Angeles, July 20 —(AP)—Gangsters' bullets early today cut down gambling czar Mickey Cohen and three other persons including a state-appointed bodyguard for the dapper hoodlum—as the party left a smart Sunset Strip cafe.

None of the party was killed outright but all were in serious condition, including Harry Cooper, a special bodyguard assigned to Cohen by the California attorney general.

The other victims were Miss Dee David, a blonde, and Edward (Neddie) Herbert, a Cohen henchman. Herbert escaped 11 gangland bullets only a month ago as he was entering his apartment.

Cohen is a key figure in the sizzling grand jury inquiry into police vice rackets which already has resulted in a wholesale shakeup of the Los Angeles police department.

Only yesterday Attorney General Fred Hower disclosed that he had assigned Cooper to guard Cohen, presumably because Cohen had expressed fear that eastern gangsters were in town to assassinate him.

Barney Ruditsky, co-owner of Sherry's restaurant, where the shooting took place, said everybody was leaving the place about 11 p.m. (PST) when the shotgun charges rang out.

"It sounded like firecrackers and everybody hit the ground. There were about 25 or 30 people on the street at the time."

"Cooper yelled 'I'm hit!'" Ruditsky, a former New York City detective, said the shots came from across the street in the vicinity of the Blue Grey building which serves as offices for the various enterprises of the crooner.

Sheriff's deputies later found two shotguns across the street. Cohen told district attorney's investigator Leo Stanley that he didn't "know what the shooting was all about."

"Miss Florabel Muir, widely known newspaper columnist, was pulled over the sidewalk. A bullet went through her sleeve and grazed her arm. She was taken to Variety magazine, the Los Angeles Mirror and the New York Daily News."

Ruditsky said he found seven empty shotgun cartridges on the other side of the street. He apparently the gunmen had fled on foot.

Doctors at the Hollywood receiving hospital said that Cooper had received two shots through the abdomen. Cohen, who got it in the shoulder, was reported in serious condition. Herbert also was reported in critical condition, one shot reportedly entering his spinal cord. The girl was shot four times in the back but her condition was reported the best of the four.

Cohen is 35; Herbert, 35, and Miss David, 26.
Cohen, who fronts as a Hollywood haberdasher, has had many brushes with the law and several with assassins' bullets. A year ago Harry "Hooky" Rothman, hoodlum associate of Cohen, was slain in a shooting in his hands nearby and it is no secret that the bullets were meant for Mickey, too.

Police grilled Cohen extensively in the Bugsy Siegel killing of two years ago but nothing ever came of it. Siegel was ambushed as he sat in the luxurious mansion of international playgirl Virginia Hill. Mrs. Cohen, summoned to her husband's bedside, saw him briefly. She was led away, shaking with grief. Doctors had to give her a sedative to quiet her.

The arrest and quick, secret release of seven Cohen henchmen last April in an assault case touched off the current grand jury investigation which has rocked the Los Angeles police department. The henchmen were arrested by two rookie policemen soon after they were seen leaving the scene of a beating of a radio shop owner. Higherups in the police department are charged with ordering their "hushed-up" release.

Cohen and the henchmen are under indictment for conspiracy in the beating and for plotting to obstruct justice. His trial is pending.

Still trying to make pickles like Grandmother used to do, Hennystead county homemakers are finding more and more that the secret is knowing your vinegars. Home demonstration Agent Lorraine Blackwood explained today that vinegar is the most important ingredient in pickling.

Vinegars most commonly used in pickling are cider vinegar and white vinegar. Cider vinegar is used when a strong flavor is wanted, and white vinegar is used for color is important. White vinegar is most often used in pickling onions and cauliflower.

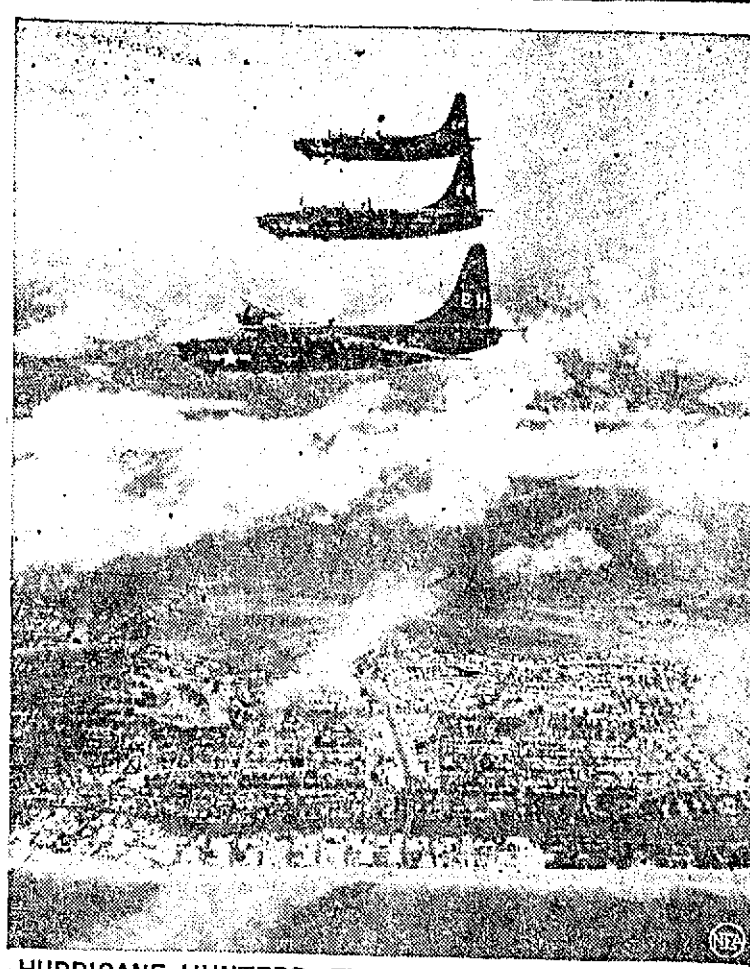

There is a difference in the strength of vinegars, too. Most vinegars are from four to six percent acetic acid. Sometimes vinegar is spoken of as 40- to 60 grain vinegar, which means four to six percent acetic acid. Vinegars are stronger than they were some years ago, and for this reason, pickles made by old recipes sometimes are too sour.

Before diluting vinegar for pickles it is well to check to see the percentage of acetic acid it contains. If vinegar is used as a preservative, spoilage is likely to occur if the acid in the vinegar is not kept above two per cent, she pointed out.

"Vinegars, too, that the liquid in the vegetables or fruits will dilute the vinegar."

"Our boy must be an exceptionally fast runner," one neighbor woman said to another. "I see him out of this morning's paper that he fairly burst up the track with his record-breaking speed. I suppose you saw him do it?"

"I did not see him do it. But I saw the track this morning and there was nothing but clinders there!"

DOROTHY DIX Slovenly Housekeeper

Dear Miss Dix: I have been married for three years and have a sweet baby girl. Even before the baby came my wife and I quarreled over her slovenly housekeeping. She would make an effort to clean up for a while, but now she just lets everything go and uses the baby for an alibi. I am able to afford one servant for her. What can I do?

Answer: If a woman is just naturally trifling and lazy and slovenly, she is incurable. She will always love her case better than anything else on earth and no amount of coaxing or nagging will galvanize her into action. The only thing that a man cursed with that kind of wife can do is to make enough money to hire a good maid who will make him a comfortable home in which to live.

There are some faults in a wife that a husband can correct if he goes about it with tact and firmness, but he wastes his time trying to reform a lazy one. There is nothing in her to which he can appeal. She has no sense of duty, or else she would realize that she isn't playing fair in not being a good housekeeper. She has no sense of pride, or else she would be ashamed to go slopping and untidily dressed and to keep a house that looks like a pigsty.

Hence the man with such a wife must either get rid of her or make up his mind to endure her as she is. He can never change her. As for your wife making an alibi of the baby, that's a common feminine practice. Thousands of women use their children as a standing excuse for everything they do and leave undone.

Plenty of women simply slump after the first baby is born. They let themselves go untidy. They don't even comb their hair or put on a decent dress for dinner. They never read any more. They give up their music or their painting or whatever accomplishments they had. They drop out of their old clubs and associations and get dull and unattractive and lose all of their old graces and charms.

And the excuse they offer for it is the baby. They make a smoke screen of the poor little mite in the cradle, behind which they hide their indolence and general lack of pep and ambition. Also this supermother devotion saves their faces because it sounds grand and noble for them to be devoting themselves to their children.

But in reality, it is only a subterfuge. It is only a woman hiding behind the baby's pinafore to cause any woman who wants to find time to take care of her children and do everything else she desires to do. As is witnessed by the myriads of women who are model mothers and housewives and yet frequent beauty shops and belong to clubs and play golf and help run the communities in which they live.

But as a standing excuse there is nothing equal to a baby.

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix: What do you think about the married woman who makes a personal friend out of another woman's husband and makes him handsome presents but makes no effort to be friendly with his wife? Naturally, the wife objects, displays jealousy, which results in her husband lying about the gifts he receives. What should the wife do?

Answer: I think a married woman who tries to take another woman's husband away from her commits one of the most cruel and distasteful crimes in the world, for she is ruthlessly breaking up a home just to gratify her own vanity and to get a thrill out of the flirtation.

But a woman can't have much confidence in her charms if she feels that she has to woo a man with expensive gifts. Evidently your husband is not in love with her for her own sake, but he puts himself in a very contemptible position when he becomes a sort of male gold-digger.

The only thing you can do is to sit tight and to hide your jealousy. You will get nowhere by making scenes and reproaching him with his affair, but you might shame him out of it by making him see what a ridiculous position he is putting himself in if you would laugh and point out his presents to your friends and make a few wisecracks about them.

South Leads in Production of Pulpwood

New Orleans, July 20—(UP)—The Southern States led the nation in producing pulpwood during 1948, the southern forest experiment station announced today.
Total production in the south during 1948 was a record 11,379,000 cords, the station said. That is some 2,000,000 cords more than the record set in 1947.
Five new mills were added to the 50 already in southern operation. The capacity of the south pulp and paper industry has quadrupled since 1936, the report said.
By the end of last year, the experts said, southern mills could turn out some 18,000 tons of pulp every day, or as much as the rest of the country combined.

The Story: Mrs. Malone is uncertain whether Mrs. Everson, who apparently is fleeing from atomic warfare before it begins, is crazy or not. Mrs. Malone is the cook in a giant trailer pulled by a truck and driven by a uniformed chauffeur which Mrs. Everson uses as a home. After a while, Mrs. Everson entertained great scientists and perhaps one talked out of turn. At any rate she is sure only a few survivors will remain after atomic bombs rain in the next war. Mrs. Everson intends to be one of them. So the wealthy widow has sold all of her property and bought jewels and two trailers. She is fleeing to a place that is supposed to be safe in an atom bomb attack. With her is the Marchese Dellacasa, a companion; Victor, a Filipino houseboy; Rudy, the chauffeur; Mrs. Malone tries to run away but she is halted by Mrs. Everson, who tells the Marchese to persuade her to stay. The Marchese reassures Mrs. Malone but when she asks about the possibilities of a terrible catastrophe, he replies that he has no choice but to believe what Mrs. Everson believes.

Mrs. Malone sucked in her breath. The Marchese Dellacasa listened as she asked: "Then isn't it cowardly to run away like this?"

He hesitated before answering. "If so," he said at last, "then I am a coward. I am running away because I have already seen too much of death and destruction. The pattern is familiar to me: an association of things that should remain apart, a disassociation of things that should remain together."

He stood for a moment, his expression remote, inscrutable. Then, with a visible effort, he thrust aside what had absorbed him, and smiled.

"Perhaps the members of this party are destined to survive," he said, "together with a few others here and there throughout the world. It may be our privilege to take the first steps into Nirvana. Perhaps, when the catastrophe is over, we will know why it had to happen. Or perhaps we too will perish. We will find out soon enough."

"You mean it's going to happen right away?"

"Very soon."

"Who found out about it?"

He shook his head. "Science has its sleuths," he said. "And secrets are for safe. I advise you to let it go at that. I have. Or perhaps it would be better if you were to let it go. Laugh up your sleeve. Do your work. Accept your salary. Enjoy the ride."

He reached out suddenly and patted her shoulder.

"Pleasant dreams," he said. "You will feel differently tomorrow."

Mrs. Malone lay awake most of the night. Just before dawn, exhausted by futile questioning of herself, she fell asleep.

The trailer was in motion when Mrs. Malone awoke. She drew back the curtains and looked out upon the familiar desert. Her watch said that it was already 8:30. Hurriedly she dressed.

In the kitchen she found the Marchese, preparing breakfast. He wore pajamas made of cream-colored silk, a brown silk robe and a muffler. His feet were thrust into leather sandals.

He explained cheerfully that Mrs. Everson's temper was stoutry in the morning. She wasn't fit for human companionship until after she had her coffee. He alone could make it to suit her taste. It must be black, clear, piping hot. Neither perked, dripped nor boiled, but brought to the exact point of lift and froth, and stirred, set aside. Three teaspoonsful to the cup—very strong indeed.

"How do you feel this morning?" he asked.

Mrs. Malone had to admit she felt better. The familiar smell of coffee and frying bacon. The bright sunlight. The exhilarating sense of forward motion. Her own good health and balance. All of these factors served to erase the terrors of the night before.

Mrs. Malone was a woman who enjoyed happiness; she took no pleasure in trivial melancholy or in self-pity. She had known sorrow and had given away to grief, but not for long. Now she bounced from the depths to the level of familiar experience, catching hold of the ingenious devices men had contrived to save themselves time and labor—the coils and pyrex containers and controlled explosions and water jets.

"Shall I take the tray in to Madam?"

"If you like. Only don't make conversation."

"No, sir."

Mrs. Everson was sitting Turk-fashion on her bed. She wore a nightgown so transparent that Mrs. Malone was embarrassed. In spite of the ventilators and whirling fans, the narrow room was full of cigarette smoke.

"Good morning, Madam."

"Put the tray here beside me," Mrs. Everson said.

Her eyes hovered hungrily over the dishes. She lifted covers, turned back the folded napkins which enclosed two slices of "hot toast."

"You've forgotten the fruit juice."

"The gentleman didn't say—"

Mrs. Malone began. "I'm sorry. At once, Madam."

"See that it isn't too cold. And tell the gentleman, as you call him, to get out of the kitchen."
